Gustave H. schwab, representing the various transatiantic steamship companies, made a general statement on their behalt. He suggested that the examination of emigrants should be left to the European agents of the acauship companies, these agents being placed under neary bands.

The companies wer willing to be held responsible for their foreign agents, and would not only permit but welcome assistance and supervision by United States agents abroad. After the first of January the Companies proposed of their own motion to discontinue carrying steerage passengers without any resievence to legislation. Mr. Schwab was not prepared to say how long the discontinuance would last. uance would last.

If: Schwab believed that two physicians wild be sufficient to conduct an examination of passengers before sailing from rome.

As to the quarantine matter, Mr. Schwab thought a foreign quarantine the only leasible method, as the additional detentian of vessels at American ports would, he believed, cause an entire suspension of travel except in the steerage. His Roommate Caused His Arrest.
